The textile industry is one of the most polluting realities on our planet with fast fashion pushing the mass-production of cheap, disposable clothing and unethical labor practices. With this Material Talks edition, we want to show a more positive side of textiles dedicated to projects with rescued materials, an open source approach to production, and the (re)consideration of the value of making. Join us for the future of fibers with Nienke Hoogvliet (Studio Nienke Hoogvliet), Sara Diaz Rodriguez (Studio HILO) and Lara Sohreh (13RUGS). This Material Talks edition is organized in collaboration with Lottozero (Center for textile design, art and culture) hosted from Prato, Italy.
